Britons all safe after plane found in Sudan

Nairobi, Feb 1.—Sixteen British guests of President Amiu of Uganda, stranded in a remote area of Sudan after their aircraft crash landed, were safe and well in their hotel in Kampala tonight after an interrescue operation, national rescue operation, Uganda radio announced. A government spokesman said in the broadcast that President Amin was "greatly relieved and delighted", especially at the safe return of two Scortish bagpipers who had taken their pipes with them on their ill-fated trip to a northern Uganda game park. A twin-engined presidential Otter aircraft carrying the Britons, two Ugandan officials and four Ugandan crew was forced to land in Sudan on Sunday after bad weather diverted it from Kidepo national game park, its scheduled destination, the spokesman said. The aircraft apparently ran out The aircraft apparently ran out

It was traced today in bush 34 miles inside southern Sudan by a Ugandan pilot. The crew and passengers including and passengers, including Judith, Lady Listowel, aged 72, were eight miles away in a village identified as Iskoto.
President Amin thanked President Nimeiry of Sudan, the Governments of Emiopia and Kenya and Pan American World Airways for helping in the rescue soon as President Amin heard of the rescue he ordered the passengers to be taken to kidepo national park lodge for medical attention and refreshmenus, and then to Kampala.

This directive has been implemented and the passengers are now safely back at their hotel in Kampala", he said. "The President requests her Majesty's Government to pass on this information to the families, relatives and friends of the passengers. All those concerned should be assured that they are safe, well and in good health."

At midnight, however, the reception desk at the Nile Hotel in the capital where the group were booked, said they had still not returned. It was presumed they were spending the night at Entebbe on the shore of Lake

Victoria where the rescue operation was coordinated. The spokesman said President Amin had spent the days of the search "very worried and concerned about the safety of the persons on board, especially the two Scottish pipers "Those close to the President reported that he would not even Labour's moderate back-benchers are to take an initia-tive this mouth in the party's ideological conflict in an attempt to roll back the advance of the left.

The initiative will take the form of a document from the Manifesto Group of MPs, who organized themselves more than two years ago to meet the chal-lenge in Parliament of the leftwing Tribune group.

One of the authors is Mr Horam, Under-Secretary of State for Transport, although numberers are not supposed to be members of the Manifesto Group.

In the section on public spending the authors say the Government should avoid raising it to a level so high that it can be financed only by printing money.

The document advocates an income policy although recognizing the difficulties involved. It suggests that the Government, the unions, and the enoloyers should bargain annually for the next year's average settlement and that the unions and employers should then be left to argue out the distributtion of the agreed figure.

A two-to-one vote in favour had been indicated by early returns, but when the votes were counted it was found that the Durham coalfield, as well as the traditionally militant Yorkshire, Scotland and Kent areas, bad found the deal unacceptable. The Scottish craftsmen were also against.

Sir Derek Ezra, chairman of the coal board, said last night: "I am glad there is a vote in favour of acceptance. backing for pay restraint but the evident lack of popularity of the scheme in other By Our Labour Editor Professional civil servants areas was not. The deal barely scraped home in the Midlands, Derbyshire, Lancashire, North-umberland and Cumbria. The executive of the National Union of Mineworkers had decided to have agreed to a third year of pay restraint, despite opposi-tion from left-wing union leaders who want to abandon the social contract. The Chan-cellor of the Exchequer's strategy of tax cuts in return for continuing wage curbs will be defended by the Institute of Professional Civil Servants.

Professional Civil Servants.

The institution, which represents more than 100,000 government scientists, professional men, industrial specialists and Ministry of Defence experts, will publish its plan this week for a continuing in-come policy. But it will empha-size that support for Mr Healey's pay-restraint proposals, put by the Chancellor to a TUC team at a Downing Street working disser last night, is conditional. The professional civil servants agree that wage curbs should continue for another year from August 1, but they want a percentage increase with a minimum underpinning increase to protect the lower paid. They are seeking flexibility in wage negotiations so that productivity schemes and pay reconstruction agreements can go ahead.

They will also demand from the Civil Service Department correction of anomalies and eroded differentials.

They will also insist on a return to free collective bar-gaining from August, 1978. That would mean restoration of the Civil Service pay research unic exercise that would increase wages for civil servants from April 1979.

Mr William McCall, general secretary of the institution, said last night: "The new policy needs to be much more flexible than its predecessors. Any repetition of the old flat rate formula would simply stand to chance of being accepted by the trade union movement as the basis of a Employers will urge the Prime Minister today to com-promise on the issue of indus-trial democracy. Mr Callaghan will be warned that if the Government shows no willingness to meet industry halfway then it must expect the whole industrial strategy exercise to wither on the vine.

The employers are now replacing the threat of pulling out of the strategy altogether with a more subtle approach. They are indicating that in the absence of flexibility on worker-directors, the strategy will simply peter out for want of enthusisam from the indusenthusisam from the indus-trialists who have to do most of the work on the 40 strategy working parties and the indus-trial leaders who sit on the National Economic Development Council.

The appeal will be made at cracy.

Lord Watkinson, CBI president, said the confederation was not looking for a confrontation on the issue. But, he added, the meeting he had called for with the Prime Minister, which is expected to take place within the next 10 days, would be crucial. He said: "Certainly we are not looking for a breakdown, but if we were put in a certain position a breakdown there could be." He said that he would use the NEDC meeting today to make a formal statement on Bullock. He would remind the Prime Minister that the spirit of the Chequers meeting which started the industrial strategy exercise was that there must be a move away from confrontation towards a method of working together in the national interest. He would also remind Mr Callaghan of his own words that any development in industrial democracy must be based on the consent of all the parties.

Lord Watkinson said he was trying to warn the Government that CBI leaders saw no charge at all of their members going along with the consent of the consent along with certain recommendations in the majority Bullock report. Three particular issues were a main stumbling block.

The CBI and the employers' federation were totally opposed to the imposition by law of union-nominated directors on to company boards. They were against parity of representation for union-nominated and shareholder-elected directors. Finally, Lord Watkinson said, they would not agree to unions having a monopoly in the choice of worker-directors.

The CBI describes its attitudes on these three issues as one of fundamental opposition. While publicly stating its desire to avoid confrontation, privately it is realized that the issues on which it is determined to stand firm are the three on which the Government is least likely to give way.

That suggests that there must be a considerable danger of a deadlock being quickly reached. The employers were anxious yesterday to emphasize that one of their main concerns was the effect the Bullock proposals would bave on manager, from first-line manager upwards. "A large number of managers will hands in if this happens."
Mr John Methyen CBI's director general, said that any law in the industrial relations field should be flexible. Prentice attack: The trade unions are not the true voice of the workers, Mr Reg Prentice. a former Cabinet minister, told the Industrial Forum in don yesterday (our Political Staff writes).

The Bullock committee was wrong to suggest that unions should have the exclusive right to nominate worker-directors. The unions organize fewer than half the people at work in this country." New legislation should cover elected workers councils.

Jacqueline du Pré would welcome your donations towards research

There-are around 50,000 people in this country who have MS. Many of them—like Jacqueline herself—were struck down with it in the prime of their lives. Just when their hopes for the future were at their highest, children at their most demanding, mortgages at their greatest and responsibilities at their heaviest.

It isn't easy to come to terms with a disabling disease like MS. Yet so many of those who have it—whether in wheelchairs or not—are remarkable for their cheerfulness and determination to lead as full a life as possible.

And that is despite the fact that the cause still remains a mystery and there is therefore no known cure or treat-ment. But we know that as long as we can go on raising money to finance research, the problem will be cracked.

That's why we would ask you to support Jacqueline's

Biggest Civil Service union to 'black' job dispersal scheme

Labour Staff One of the Government's main regional and economic programmes was imperilled vesterday when leaders of the main Čivil Service unions made clear to Lord Peart, Lord Privy Seal, that they totally opposed the planned dispersal of 31,000 employees out of London by the mid 1980s.

The general secretaries met Lord Peart in a final effort to persuade him to review the programme in the light of the economic situation and the public expenditure cuts. But he reaffirmed the Government's view that the programme should go ahead and said no useful purpose would be served by any further review.

Ministers, he said, were convinced that dispersal would bring important benefits, especially to the regions.

His unwillingness to contemplate a review led to accu-sations that he had attended the meeting with his mind made up. "He heard our arguments but he did not listen" one general secretary said immediately after the meeting. As a result of the talks the staff side of the National Whitley Council, which represents more than 550,000 non-industrial civil servants, is to pursue with increased vigour its demand for an independent public inquiry into dispersal.

Mr Kenneth Thomas, gen-eral secretary of the Civil and the largest Civil Service union, said that as a result of the "abortive" meeting his for civil servants who do not members would be instructed want to move out of London to to withdraw all cooperation for find other jobs.

He questioned the benefit to the regions of a programme that relied on importing outsiders to fill jobs created in areas of high unemployment.

Throughout the discussions on dispersal Lord Peart and the Covernment have been made increasingly aware of growing bitterness between the Civil Service Department and the unions.

Council in retreat over school closures

By Christopher Warman

The Conservative controlling group on Buckinghamshire County Council has decided after public protest to withdraw a proposal to close five nursery schools.

The education committee

wanted parents to take over the running of the schools and to pay about half the costs, or lternatively to close them. The hostile reaction of parents and teachers to that plan, which would have saved £147,000, persuaded it to think again. Another proposal, to close the county's school library service, will take effect if the policy and resources committee and the full council agree.

The closure would save about £250,000 a year, but the Library Association says that the service is needed, and that the cost of reintroducing it in the future will be enormous.

In a letter to the council the association said that the service had been developed over 20 years and was recognized both locally and nationally as an efficient one, making available to children in about four hundred

The council is likely to increase rates for the coming year by a little more than 14 per cent. It had been thought that the increase might be as large views on devolution for Scotland and Wales, Miss Harvie Anderson (East Renfrewshire, C) stated when the committee stage of the Scotland and Wales Bill was Parliament. She moved an amendment to Clause 3 (Time of election and term of office of members of assembly) designed to ensure that the first ordinary election of members to the Scottish and Welsh assemblies was not held until after the next general election. . She said that the Bill as it stood had no time scale, leaving it to the discretion of the Secretary of State. Her amendment opened up the issue of what would be a referendum of the whole of the United Kingdom. The question of who might vote there was a referendum was likely to prove one of the most controversial in relation to the Bill. The reason for controversy must be that although there were five million Scots, probably as many, if not more, Scots were resident and worked in England.

resident and worked in England.

All MPs were particularly anxious to know the Government's mind in relation to a referendum. It would be perfectly simple to avoid difficulties in this direction if the amendment was accepted because there would be the opportunity at a general election for the whole of the United Kingdom to express its view. express its view.

The Bill was a constitutional matter for the United Kingdom as a whole. It was not too much of an exaggeration to compare it with the Reform Bill of 1832 or the Parliament Bill of 1910. If it was to stand in comparison with those great measures, then it was cer-tainly a matter upon which the United Kingdom should have Its It must be becoming increasingly

Wist would nappell (West Lothian, Lab) said that this discussion underlined how unsatisfactory it was that they did not yet know the terms of the referendum clause. Another issue concerned those people resident and working in England who believed themselves to be Scots or Weish, Many MPs had had far more determined letters than they had anticipated from people who thought that if there was to be a referendum they should have some right to take should have some right to take

He asked the Lord President (Mr Foot) if he was successful in this venture, whether he would con-sider having the district, regional and assembly elections at the same elections. They all knew in the House that if there were a series of by-elections it could bring about a general election, but the assembly was to be on a four-year fixed term. If there were a series of assembly by-elections the bal-ance could easily be changed. The more people came to know of the Bill the more they would change their minds.

These matters could only be decided by a general election.

When the reality became clear, there would be two choices for the Scottish people—that more deci-sion making should be brought to the regions, or that there should be a separate Scottish state. The choice of a separate state had never been put to the Scottish people in the knowledge that by their votes they might bring it about.

Mr Rhodes James (Cambridge, C) said that he was opposed to the Bill. He would only accept it if the people of the whole United Kingpeople of the whole United Ringdom were in favour of the principles in the Bill. The more its implications were understood, so did the opposition to it rise. The principle of devolution was one thing the amendment had the Government not announced the referendum. The people of Wales and Scotland would have an opportunity to express their opinion on the Government's proposals with a directness they could not have in a general election. They possibly night not have chosen to give themselves that freedom in a general election.

Mr Enoch Powell (South Down, UUUC) said he supported the principle of the amendment but for more different and fundamental grounds to those Miss Anderson advanced. Her propusition was that a general election would serve as a national post mortem upon the legislation which would enable the electorate retrospectively, as it electorate retrospectively, as it were, to hoard up the Act which had been passed and decide fur or against it.

Mr Colin Phipps (Dudley, West, Lab) said that he did not know any who genuinely believed that the Bill would have been before Parliament but for the February, 1974 election results. Sir Raymond Gower (Barry, C) said he was not sure whether the electorate were against the Bill. Only now were the voters becoming aware of its effects. It was wrong and contrary to constitutional history and practice that vast sums of money should already have been expended in setting up machinery for a Bill which was not yet law. The Lord Presi-dent of the Council (Mr Michael Foot) should instruct everyone in the Government to prevent further steps being taken involving expenditure to put into action the machinery of the Bill before it was passed. In fact, the procedures by which national courts may ask the European court for an in-terpretation of Community or regulations has been used only a few times by British courts and other cases before the court in Luxem-bourg involving British parties have been few. The influence and authority of the court's decisions, however, are not limited to the parties involved the case, but extend throughout the Community.

Apart from the content of Community law, and court decisions on it, British judges and lawyers have also had to learn to understand a new approach to law. Community law is based on the Continental system. English lawyers trained in the common law approach (more so than their Scottish counterparts) have had some difficulty in adapting to the new way of thinking about the law, but those who have managed to do so have found it proficable. There is now a strong body of English lawyers specializing in Community legal matters. The effect of EEC membership on the English and, to a lesser extent, Scottish legal professions has been signifi-cant. Within the next few months agreement is likely to be reached on the content of a draft EEC directive on the provision of lawyers' services, pursuant to the principle of freedom of establishment. have similar rights in Britain. When acting in other countries, a British lawyer will carry with him the mantle of his own rules of professional conduct, subject to the fundamental ethical principles of the host country. But that does not mean that he will be able to do everything in other mmunity states that he can do in Britain. He will be limited to doing the kind of work his counterpart can do; where the law-yer in the host country cannot, instance, prepare certain formal documents, the British lawyer will likewise be limited.

The directive will give a rel-atively small number of British lawyers the chance of expanding their practices in Europe. A much larger group has no such pretensions but is finding constantly having to advise clients on aspects of the affected Ьy the Community.

More than two thirds of the 54 county authorities in England and Wales have abandoned attempts to introduce lorry networks as recommended by the Heavy Commercial Vehicles (Controls and Regulations) Act, 1973, more familiarly known as

Dutch inquiry into war crimes visits Russia

Amsterdam, Feb 1.—Four Dutch investigators left today for Moscow to seek evidence on war crimes alleged to have been committed in Poland and the Soviet Union by Pieter Menten, a Dutch art collector. No control unit at jail, Home Office says

By Stewart Tendler Home Affairs Reporter

The Home Office yesterday denied that control units, cells designed to control difficult prisoners by using sensory deprivation methods, have been graphic evidence which they said showed that a unit had been opened as Wormwood Scrubs.

graphs of screens across windows at the prison which, they maintained, were evidence of the unit's presence. The Home Office said no units were established at a London prison.
A control unit at Wakefield prison was closed two years ago after the system had been criticized. But Criminon, a penal reform group, yesterday were there to stop prisoners

Prisoners would not be kept in such cells permanently and they would spend part of the day in other parts of the prison.

With the Criminon deputation yesterday was Walter Probyn who was in one of the control unit cells for part of his sen-tence. He said: "The units de-prive prisoners of natural light, sound and contact and destroy the will to live."

Move to halt pop group articles rejected by judge

A move by an author to ban The Sun from publishing further instalments of a series on Abba, the Swedish pop group, was rejected by Sir Robert Megarry, the Vice-Chancellor, in the High Court

He said: "It is a serious matter to halt a newspaper which is already composing tomorrow's issue."

A temporary ban was sought by Mr Harold Edgington, of Ronalds Road, Highbury, London, author of a book about Abba, which is due to be published on February 10. He is alleging that The Sun infringed his copyright in the book.

Sir Robert said: "The balance of convenience quite clearly lies on the side of refusing the injunction and leaving the plaintiff to seek his remedy in damages." Mr Edgington alleges that The Sun used a synopsis of his book for the series.

Second thoughts in majority dispute over Paris mayoralty

From Charles Hargrove Paris, Feb 1

Tempers have cooled a little in the controversy within the government majority over the post of Mayor of Paris. Things had almost reached breaking point at the end of last week, with the publication of letters exchanged between M Barre, the Prime Minister, and M Jacques Chirac, the president of the Gaullist Rassemblement, and the cancelling by President Giscard d'Estaing of an appointment with M Chirac.

Over the weekend, both sides began to appreciate that any further exacerbation of the conproversy must lead to a crisis in the Government and in Parlia ment. From this all the parties of the majority would lose and only the left stood to gain in the

So moves were made on both sides, leading to a lowering of the temperature of the debate.

M Chirac on Sunday received the unqualified support of his party's central committee, as well as of the Gaullist members of the Government, whose posi-tion had become exceedingly uncomfortable in the past few

He appealed to the Prime Minister and the Government to observe strict neutrality in the "primaries", which are now inevitable in Paris, between his supporters, and those of M Michel d'Ornano, the Minister

M Barre indirectly responded to this appeal. In a radio round table debate, he played down the seriousness of the controversy and said that there was no reason whatever for the Gaullist ministers to resign. They would be free to support the candidate of their choice for the win some and you lose some", he said recently.

Mr Andrew Young, the United States new representa-tive at the United Nations, isas the first black to hold the post-regarded as a symbol of a fresh American approach to the problems of the Third World, particularly Africa.

He sets out with some impressive assets. A young and promising congressman, now aged 44, he came out in support of Mr Carter at an early stage and did much to win the black votes for him. So Mr Carter would clearly not relish spectacular resignation from the United Nations post

Mr Young's views are very much the product of his own background in the South where he was beaten and jailed on occasion with Dr Martin Luther King, but where he proved a skilful negotiator. He sees the position in southern Africa as similar and believes in using similar techniques.

There has to be a transformation to majority rule, he says, and just as in the American South the support of business, both American and South African, has to be enlisted to make it as peaceful as possible. "It's in all of our interests", he said in a recent speech to the Foreign Policy Association,

"moral interest, political interest and economic interest, to be involved in a rational transformation to majority rule. And think if we are not involved. then a rational transformation is impossible and chaos is

"You racial problems in Africa than Americans are . . . and they do not have the kind of experience of conflict and confrontation with people who are culturally different that's gone on in this country over the last decade

In many ways Mr Young, like Mr Carter, sees foreign policy in moral terms. So he believes that the United States should now throw its weight behind "African solutions" in Africa. If it did so, "I think we can begin to reestablish a credi-bility in southern Africa that will enable us to get a more orderly approach to the prob-lems of the Middle East and also begin, rather than a con-frontation, a rational dialogue on economic order and the prob-lems of food and energy and nuclear proliferation and everything else." Mr Young does not believe in imposing economic sanctions on South Africa, and says he would have no qualms about retoing any proposal to do so at the United Nations, just as he would for any proposal to expe! South Africa. Such ideas would not help black South Airicans, he says, and were simply an expression of frus tration elsewhere.

He also claims sympathy with the whites in South Africa.

would want four million Israelis driven into the sea."

Pentagon denies superiority of Soviet arms

From Our Own Correspondent Washington, Feb 1

The Joint Chiefs of Staff, taking uncertain middle ground in the furore here over Soviet military intentions, have concluded that the Russians are trying to achieve "superiority" but have not yet attained it.

They were replying to Senator William Proxmire's inquiry on whether they agreed with the claim that the Soviet Union had already achieved superiority, which was made just after retiring by the outgoing Chief of Air Force Intelligence, Gen-

General Keegan, who has been sounding the alarm for years against Soviet expansion both in missiles and civil de-fence, was one of those whose views recently influenced the national intelligence estimate of national intelligence estimate of Soviet power.

City digs way out of its snow blanket

Buffalo, New York, Feb 1.— Buffalo, turned into what seemed like an outpost of the North Pole by the worst blizzard in its history, started digging out today after several days of howling winds and blinding

As the blizzard subsided, the mayor declared a state of emer-gency to keep all motorists off the roads, and snowploughs manned by city employees and 600 National Guardmen started removing 25ft deep snow drifts.

police fire | Interior portfolio in Cairo taken over by Premier Cairo, Feb 1.—M Mamdouh Salem, the Prime Minister, will take additional charge of the Interior Ministry in a Govern-ment reshuffle which follows the food price riots last month, the newspaper Al-Messa said today. Mr Salem was Interior Minister before becoming Prime Minister in 1975.

The report said President Sadat planned five ministerial changes in the limited reshuffle. An announcement is expected within 24 hours

The newspaper reported that Mr Abdul Moneim al-Sawi, deputy Speaker of the People's Assembly, was expected to become Information Minister and that the feminist leader, Mrs Aziza Husain, would take over the Social Affairs Ministry. Other changes would involve splitting the Irrigation and Agriculture portfolio, with Mr Ibrahim Shukry becoming responsible for Agriculture. The Snake-like monster in Soviet lake

Moscow, Feb 1.-Plans are being made for a student expedition to investigate the reported sighting of a huge, snakelike monster in the remote Lake Kok-Kol in Soviet Kazakhstan, a scientist involved in the project said today.

Dr Sergei Kumov, a biologist, said two students from Moscow University's biology faculty had approached him for advice.

Unlike other scientists, he was not treating the report sceptically. Scientists had a duty to search for creatures present unknown to the world of science, he said. Interest in the possibility that the Loch Ness monster could have a Soviet cousin was aroused at the weekend by the newspaper, Komsomolskaya newspaper, Komsomolskaya Pravda, which printed a letter from Mr Anatoly Pechersky, a geographer, who said he and his son had seen it in the summer of 1975.

The creature had a body 50ft long and a head over 6ft in length, he said.

Speaking on the telephone today from his Moscow home, Dr Kumov said Lake Kok-Kol was considerably smaller than Loch Ness, perhaps no more than two miles long with several deep depressions Dr Kumov said he had com-piled a large archive on the

Ethiopia to step up war against secessionists

Gondar, Ethiopia, Feb 1.— Arms and supplies were being flown into this provincial capital today as part of a continuing effort to cope with anti-government forces in the north-ast of the country.

Units of the right-wing Ethiopian Democratic Union (EDU), the Marxist Ethiopian People's Revolutionary Party (EPRP) and secessionist guerrillas from the neighbouring province of Eritrea have been parassing government forces in the province of Begemdir and Simien for several weeks.

An Ethiopian Airlines aircraft unloaded more than 100 new rifles, complete with plastic wrappers, at the airport 10 miles south of the ancient city today. Police and soldiers were there in force, some unloading other supplies including food from trailers.

The aircraft returned immediately to Addis Ababa, where number of police were waitng with equipment beside laden trucks.

Rangers League Cup hopes are lost in the ruts at Loftus Road

Football Correspondent

Asion Villa 0

Aston Villa, four times League Cup finalists, have every reason to anticipate returning to Wembley for this season's final. In last night's semi-final round first leg, which had twice been post-poned because of the state of the poned because of the state of the Lofins Road ground, they with-drew into uncharacteristic defen-

Rangers could not execute their customary near control and lost their ambition long before the end. A second leg at Villa Park can hardly be considered their second chance.

For Rangers, who could not break down the sturdy wall, it was poor compensation for the f12,000 they had spent covering the pitch. Throughout, it was Villa's strength of determination and when the new polythene covers were removed from the pitch, it was like taking a burnt cake from its baking foil. Within a few minutes the surface was the enemy of the game and this, to a large extent, was why the match developed so untidily. Another spoiling factor was the permitted rough treatment of Bowles, one of the few players prepared to carry the hall across the ruts. and divots.

Even ignoring Bowles's extravagent, persecuted appeals, he deserved more sympathy from the referee, who three times warned Robson but did not take his name. If he was making allowances for the time fervour he was also de-quality and it desperately yearned for something special.

Villa's approach was more reserved than Rangers probably expected but it was calculated restraint, with the defence closely supported by the midfield. The absence of Cropley deprived them of a strong constructive element and only Gidman, a thoughtful full back always looking for snace to

The days of European exploits seemed an age away as Rangers strained against the pitth and a quickly retreating line of defenders. The second half was wellinto its uncertain stride before they achieved their first corner. It was followed by the welcome sight of a goalkeeper diving to a well-placed shot instead of leaping into a whirl of bodies in the goal area.

The shot, by Thomas from some a whirl of bodies in the goal area. The stot, by Thomas from some 35 yards, swung around the post but still brought a feeling that something positive could emerge from a ragged tie. It was misplaced optimism. The prospect of Gray, Little and the young forward, Deehan, outrunning the older legs of the Rangers' defenders, must wait until the second leg on February 16.

Southampton defence hold | Everton late in showing out when it matters

By John Nicholls

Following their enthralling drawn game last Saturday, Southampton and Nottingham Forest again provided a feast of entertainment for a packed Dell in their FA Cup fourth round replay last night. For the second time there was little to choose between the two sides and it was a pity that one of them had to lose.

Southampton, the Cup holders, are now through to the next round and will be rewarded by a home tie against their old rivals. Manchester United, How they will fare this time remains to be seen on February 26, but with both teams seemingly approaching their form, it could be another match to Savour.

Last night's game started where Saturday's left off, with both teams thrusting forward at every opportunity. Southampton gradually tamed the Forest forwards and for a while they ruled the roost. A fine exchange of passes between Holmes and Osgood led to the first real opportunity, but Osgood's final low cross was safely gathered by Middleton. A few minutes later the same two players again worked their way down the left wing. A throw-in was quickly slipped into the middle where the 18-year-old Williams calmly shot from 20 varies, well to the right of yards, well to the right of Middleton.

This well-executed goal served of intense pressure set Southamp-ton back on their heels. For a ton back on their heels. For a while the game became combative in the physical rather than the technical sense, with Osgood and Anderson, among others, continuing the fends they commenced on Saturday. The referee, Jack Taylor, soon calmed things down rain yesterday caused the post-ponement of the FA Cup fourth round replay between Wolverhamp-ton Wanderers and Ipswich Town at Molineux. The pitch was de-clared unfit by the local referee, Jack Taylor. However, with the weather forecast more favourable. Wolves are hopeful the game can be staged tonight.

The postponement has given Munro valuable extra time to recover from an abdominal strain received on Saturday. But the Wolves defender also has problems with a recurring chest muscle injury and Brazler, 19, stands by.

The Ipswich manager, Bobby Robson, is hopeful that the Eng-land defender, Beattle, will be fit for the game. Beattle, who missed nolls and apart from a couple more long distance shots by Williams, it was the Midland side which Nottingham Forest 1 looked the more threatening. Southampton's defence generally held out, but occasionally they made extraordinary lapses, from one of which Forest equalized. McGovern lofted a free kick into the area which could have been cleared by either of two Southampton players. They both missed it and Robertson inped behind them and turned the ball back into the goalmouth. It was headed out, but only to Woodcock, who was well as the second works are well as the second works. who gave Wells no chance.

Forest continued to press forward in the second half, yet still Southampton held out, with Steele defending like a man possessed. How this untiring player can be both loaned out and available for transfer must be one of the mysteries of football. As so often haroenes when one team pins everyhappens when one team pins every-thing on attack, it is the other that scores. So it was after 66 minutes when one of Southamp-ton's breakaways led to the win-

Ball had time to lob a beautifully-judged pass ahead of Mac-Dougall who rau through the square Nottingham defence and gently chipped over the groping Middleton into the net. Swindon Town 1 Everton 2 There were cheers for Everton's new manager, Gordon Lee, freshly imported from Newcastle, as he took a bow in the centre circle before the start; there was little to cheer him in much of what he subsequently saw of his new side in last night's FA Cup fourth round replay at Goodison Park. Little, in fact, until hope had almost gone, with Swindon Town, of the third division, a goal up with only 12 minutes left. Two goals in the last six minutes must have restored Mr. Lee's faith in a goals in the last six minutes must have restored Mr Lee's faith in a kindly Providence; they won the match for Everton when the prospect seemed distinctly remote and, in the process, did a disservice to a lively Swindon side, taking up where they left off on Saturday and certainly far from overawed.

Palace pick up two more valuable points

Crystal Palace 2 Port Vale 0 Crystal Palace collected two more valuable points in their third division promotion challenge but were far from impressive. Post Vale, winners over Burnley in the FA Cup on Saturday, snowed colourless form and Palace were only slightly better.

The frustration showed among the players and there were five bookings. Into the referee's book went Evans and Hinshelwood, of Palace and McLaren, Kennerley, and Griffiths, of Port Vale.

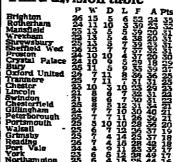

A lively performance from Chatterton saved Palace who lost their leading scorer, Swindlehurst, through injury in the 13th minute. Chatterton perked up proceedings by heading the first goal in the 38th minute but the game, watched by Palace's lowest league crowd for more than eight years. soon deteriorated again, although Perrin salvaged something with a second goal in the 88th minute.

Chester 3 Reading took the lead through the penalty spot, top scorer Murray taking the kick in the 36th minute after being pulled down by Chester's goalkeeper Millington.

Then Chester pressed hard and in the 71st minute Richardson scored direct from a corner. Edwards added the second in the marksman. Justead he stuck to 86th minute and Crossley scored whistle.

Myrtle beat Anthony EgremontLee 15—7, 17—14, 15—5.

Egremont-Lee was three times within a point of winning the second game, at 14—9 and twice at 14—11. Those points eluded him because Myrtle, not relishing the thought of an extended match, was able to find extra nace on service able to find extra pace on service and in the rallies at the right moment.

The match produced the best rackets of the meeting. Both men could be described as pure rackets players, their styles being un-

That India took no further wicket in the three-quarters of an hour that remained when Randall was out was no fault of India's bowlers. Half a dozen times Greig played and missed, mostly at Bedi; when Prasanna came on Bedi; when Prasanna came on Tolchard survived a confident appeal for a catch in the close field. Tolchard at least used his feet and Greig his own peculiar ways and means. But batting, I am afraid, was made to look as much 3 matter of luck as judgment, the putch as impossibly difficult as earlier in the day India's batsmen had made it appear playable enough.

Greig howled today not like as Greig bowled today not like an England off-spinner so much as someone turning his hand to off-spin. He has never I think, bowled off breaks so well agent at he ald off breaks so well again as he did at Port of Spain in 1974, when he took 13 wickets and won a Test match; neither can he have bowled them much worse than he bowled them much worse than he did now. On a turning pitch his legside field consisted of a long leg on the boundary, a deep square leg, a fine leg half way back to the boundary, a midwicket, a deep mid-on and one short leg. The busiest field was the fine leg half way back, who happened to be Underwood, the other bowler. Greig was cur too Nor once her be Underwood, the other power, be Underwood, the other power, Greig was cut too. Not once but several times. His figures today were 13—1—40—0.

Even Underwood's line, at any rate to start with, was not as impercable as usual, and except when he hit one particularly bad patch, just outside the right-hander's off stump, he turned the hall nothing like the result of the start of the ball nothing like as much as the India at the start were 105 for

At 154 Yajuvendra, having made four scoring strokes in 100 minutes today (one four and three singles) skied Underwood to mid-on, hitting against the spin Vic on, hitting against the spin. Viswanath, when he was 14, could have been caught at slip by Brearley, low and left-handed; other hard chances also went down. In no way was it England's morning—or England's afternoon, let alone their evening.

Viswanath played splendidly for his 79 not out. For him and Gavaskar both to bat well in the same innings is what India have been waiting for this series. Now they did so. The score when Viswanath came in was an uncertain 124 for five. He remained until Bedi declared at teatime, making sure that England had enough runs to make to rule out. enough runs to make to rule out, on this pitch, an English victory. By then, amazingly enough, India had made their best score of the series, on a pinch on which England were anyway expected, if not expecting, to make their worst; Greig, quite often, was conducting operations from the boundary's edge. To run out Bedi, Lever knocked out the middle stump from cover point, as Bedi answered Viswanath's call for a single: it was one of England's few joyful moments on a day that was badeven for them.

The Dealer stakes his Cheltenham claim

By Michael Seely

The Sun Alliance Hurdle at Chehrenham's National Hunt Festi-val meeting is the probable target of The Dealer, who romped bome by 20 lengths in the Persian War Novices Hurdle at Chepstow yes-terday afternoon. Getting the better of Master Smudge and Escapologist at the third flight from home, The Dealer went on to win unchallenged.

The Dealer's victory emphasized once again the underlying strength of Fred Winter's team. Owned in partnership by Mrs Derek Hague and Hugh Ross, The Dealer was originally bought for them by Charles Radclyffe, a steward at Chepstow. Colin Davies, who prepared Per Colin Davies, who prepared Persian War for his three Championship Hurdle victories, presented a picture, after the race, of Henry Alper's great horse, to Mrs Winter, who was depunizing for her hushand. Another portrait of Chepstow racecourse, which looked magnificent in the springlike sunshine yesterday, was given to the winning owners.

Mr Alper, who was there yesterday, presented a cheque for 125 to John Francome, and another for £10 to the lad who looks after The Dealer. Admirers of Persian War will be glad to know that he is still alive and kicking at Harry Carr's farm at Wickhambrook, near Newmarket.

Bob Davies rode a well-judged race on Dulwich, sending the gelding clear early in the straight. It was just as well he did so, for Wild Fox, a rather half-hearted character who possesses plenty of ability, started to close fast on the run-in and would have caught Dulwich with a little farther to travel. HIS LORDSHIP said that a collision took place between the two ships off Shanghai in 1974. Both ships were damaged. The owners of the Eleftherotria claimed damages in the Admiralty Court for the collision on the ground that it was caused by the negligence of the defendants, their servants or agents. Following negotiations it was agreed, inter alia, that the defendants were 85 per cent to blame; that the defendants counter-claim be dismissed; and that the defendants should pay to the plaintiffs as damages 85 per cent of the loss and damage occasioned to the plaintiffs. The question was whether, where plaintiffs had suffered damage or sustained loss in a currency other than sterling, they were entitled to recover damages expressed in the other currency.

Both ships were Greek. The Elef-

Law Report February 1 1977

Before Mr Justice Brandon

[Judgment delivered January 28] A party who has suffered damage or loss in a foreign currency in consequence of the nort of another party is entitled to recover damages expressed in the other currency.

Both ships were Greek. The Eleftherotria was owned by a Liberian company whose head office was in Piraeus and managed for them by agents with their principal place of business in New York. The bank account used for all payments in respect of the ship was a United States dollar account in New York. After the collision the ship went to Shanghai for remporary repairs, then on to Yokohama, where it was hoped that permanent repairs would be done there for a substantial period, it seemed reasonable tial period, it seemed reasonable to the owners to order the ship to Los Angeles for repairs to be carried out there. Refore the decision in Miliango: r George Frank (Textiles) Ltd ([1976] AC 443) two rules of law had been firmly settled. (1) A court had no power to give a money judgment expressed in a currency other than sterling. (2) Where an amount due, whether by debt or damages, was assessed originally in a currency other than sterling, it was to be converted into sterling, in case of debt at the date the obligation to pay arose; in case of damages for breach of contract at the date of the breach; and in the case of damages in tort at the date when curred. Miliangos did not decide whether a court could and should award damages for breach of contract or for tort in a foreign currency. Since Miliangos the question whether damsges for breach of contract thould be awarded in a foreign currency had been considered in Jean Kraut AG v Albany Fabrics Ltd. ([1976] 3 WLR 872), where Mr Justice Eveleigh awarded damages in Swiss francs awarded damages in Swiss francs to a Swiss plaintiff for non-acceptance of cloth deliveries by English defendants. His Lordship said that in that case the award seemed to have been based on the concept that Swiss currency was the agreed currency of compensation under the contract. His Lordship had also been referred to The Folius (unreported, July 9, 1976) (charterers sued for damage to cargo) where Mr Justice Robert Goff had rejected that concept on the ground that there was no agreed currency of compensation, and an award of damages in Brazilian cruzerios was made on the lian cruzerios was made on the basis that that was the currency in which the loss was directly and in which the loss was directly and immediately incurred.

Three solutions to the problem of how damages should be awarded were canvassed. For convenience they could be referred to as the sterling solution (applying the principle of The Volturno ([1921] 2 AC 544) that damages should be awarded in sterling only); the currency of expenditure or loss solution (awarding damages in respect of any item of expenditure or loss in whatever currency, sterling or foreign, it was directly or ling or foreign, it was directly or immediately incurred); and the currency of the plaintiff solution (the currency with which the plaintiff had the closest connexion).

It was argued for the defendants that the court was bound by The Voltumo to adopt the sterling solution. That and other cases had proceeded on the basis that the court had no power to give a money judgment in a foreign cur-rency at all. On that basis they rency at all. On that casts they laid down a role as to the date at which a loss which had to be valued originally in a foreign currency should be converted into sterling. But now Miliangos gave power to give a money judgment in foreign currency, so that conversion into sterling was no longer version into sterling was no longer restant in stering was no longer essential. In those circumstances The Volturno did not preclude his Lordship from awarding damages in a foreign currency where it was lost to do so. just to do so.

His Lordship considered the three solutions and said that if the court were free, as a matter of law, to choose any one of the three it should choose the currency of the plaintiff solution, which exposed a plaintiff solution, which exposed a plaintiff only to the effect of changes in the internal value of his own currency. If the currency of the currency is the currency of the curre rency of expenditure or loss solu-tion were adopted, there might be great difficulty in deciding in which currency the loss occurred. But that choice was not, as a matter of law, open to his Lord-Where a plaintiff suffered damage in consequence of a tort, the court must first put a value on the damage. The effect of

of the obligation to convert into sterling the amount of the damage arrived at, in the initial valuation. in the foreign currency in which the loss occurred. Milimgos, however, did not go further abil authorize a court either to make the initial valuation on some different basis from that laid down in the earlier authorities or, having made it on the same basis. then to convert the amount arrived at into the currency of the plaintiff instead of converting it into sterling. The contention that the initial valuation should that the initial valuation should be made, not in the currency in which the loss was directly incurred, but in the currency of the plaintiff, was rejected by the Court of Appeal in The Canadian Transport (1932) 43 Li LR 409). In The Folius Mr Justice Robert Goff regarded the decision in The Compiler Transport of the condition of the Canadian Transport of the condition of the Canadian Transport of the Canadian Mr Justice Robert Goff regarded the decision in The Canadian Transport of contregarded the decision in The Canadian Transport as binding authority, unaffected in that respect by Milliangos, which precluded him from adopting the currency of the plaintiff solution, not only in a case of damages for tort, but also in a case for breach of contract.

tort, but also in a case for breach of contract.

His Lordship agreed with the analysis of Mr Justice Robert Goff but not with his view that adoption of the currency of the plainiff would in practice give rise to serious problems. No doubt there would be difficulties, especially with multi-national companies, in establishing what was the currency with multi-national companies, in establishing what was the currency in which a plaintiff had felt-or borne a loss, but those difficulties were not insuperable.

On the footing that the currency of the plaintiff solution was not open to the court, the choice lay between the sterling solution and the currency of the loss solution. The latter in minimine was to be The latter in principle was to be preferred. The hasic principle of the law of damages was restitution in integrum. If a plaintift had incurred expenditure or loss in a foreign currency the requirement that he should receive restitutio in integrum was in most cases more likely to be satisfied, so far as it could be, by awarding him damages in that currency, than by award-ing damages in that currency con-verted into sterling at the date of incurrence. Such conversion ex-posed him to the effect of changes in the exchange rate in the period between suffering his damage and being paid compensation.

The answer to the question was that where plaintiffs had incurred expenditure or loss directly and immediately in a currency other than sterling, they were entitled to recover damages in respect of such expenditure or loss in such other currency. Judgment should be for the appropriate amount in the foreign currency or its sterl-ing equivalent at the date of pay-

His Lordship emphasized that the court had been concerned only with damage and loss suffered by a plaintiff in consequence of physical damage done tortiously to a chattel, namely a strip owned by him. Analogous problems would no doubt arise in the future in various other fields, but such problems would have to be examined and resolved in future cases.

Mr Michael Crystal for Mr Brauch; Mr M. A. F. Lyndon-Stanford and Mr R. G. B. McCombe for the petitioning creditors

LORD JUSTICE GOFF said that Mr Brauch, whose domicile of origin was Austrian, did not have an English domicile. For the court to have jurisdiction it had to be established, pursuant to section 4(1)(d) of the Bankruptcy Act, 1914, that Mr Brauch, for some part though not necessarily the whole of the year preceding the bankruptcy petition, either (1) whole of the year preceding the bankrupncy petition, either (1) ordinarily resided or (2) had a dwelling house or (3) had a place of business or (4) carried on business personally or by means of an agent or manager in England. It was clear that over a number of years he had engaged in property speculation, each property. erty speculation, each property acquired being purchased by one of 90 companies, all incorporated in the Channel Islands. in the Channel Islands.

His interest in the ny of cases. His literest in the companies was obscure, but he controlled them and by some link clearly intended to make a profit for himself out of the transfor ninsen our of the deal actions.

The expressions "had a place of business" and "has carried on business" were two separate jurisdictional qualifications, but in the present case they coalesced because it was conceded that if

Mr Brauch was carrying on business within the meaning of section 4(1)(d) then he had a place of ing on his own business; and that in the present case the only business carried on was that of business carried on was that of the companies.

The peritioning creditors' case was that it was enough if the debtor was employed in a business, at all events if he controlled it, but that, even so, Mr Brauch had a business independently of that conducted by the companies.

In his Lordship's judgment it would be wrong to hold that section 4(1)(d) applied to a person who was running his company's business even though he was the sole beneficial shareholder and in complete control.

complete control. complete control.

There was, however, nothing inconsistent with finding that such a person was also conducting a separate business of his own and such a finding would be right on the evidence in the present case. The evidence compelled a finding that Mr Brauch had personally carried on the business of procarried on the business of pro-moting or acquiring companies to speculate in land, or alternatively. that of finding suitable sites for that of finding smtable sites for development or investment, negotiating a price and financing the purchase. The properties were then vested in companies and development were the business of the company and not Mr Brauch.

It had been presed that the It had been urged that the registrar had not defined the business which he had held to exist. But it was not necessary to exis. But it was not necessary to be precise, and the definition and description which his Lordship had given was completely adequate. Although that was sufficient to dispose of the appeal, the questions raised on the other two conditions in section 4 (1) (d) onght to be determined. It was submitted on behalf of Mr Brauch that to establish "ordinary residence" the physical presence of the debtor within the jurisdiction for a substantial and continual period for some commercial nurses exercised to degree.

It was argued that the petitionbusiness in Grosvenor Street, ing creditors could not succeed on the ground of "ordinarily resident" because they could not succeed on the ground of "ordinarily resident" because they could not succeed on the ground of "ordinarily resident" because they could not succeed on the ground of "ordinarily resident" because they could not succeed on the ground of "ordinarily resident" because they could not be right:

It was a right to the three could not succeed on the ground of "ordinarily resident" because they could not be right:

It was a right to the three periods. but that was all.
Crucial findings of fact made by question was one of fact and the registrar were that Mr Brauch had certainly not been a casual visitor to England; that he had spent nights here; that he was here on business; and that the proportion of his time so spent was sufficiently material.

There was clearly sufficient evidence to support those findings and it would be quite wrong to disturb them, and undisturbed, as a question of fact and degree, they led properly to the conclusion that Mr Brauch had been "ordinarily resident" in England.

Only the question of a "dwelling house" remained. It had been ureed that a debtor must have a proportion of his time so spent urged that a debtor must have a legal or equitable interest in the alleged dwelling house. It was not alleged owelling noise. It was not necessary to decide whether that was right or wrong because the lease of a house in Connaught Street, London, was vested in Mr Brauch. But it was doubtful whether the submission was in truth correct. His Lordship could not see why a hare lightness why a not see why a bare licensee should not be held to have a dwelling house. It might also be possible to find, as Mr McCombe had urged, that a debtor had a dwelling house in England although he had not in fact been in occupation during the relevant year. One had to look at all the facts and see to what con-clusion they led. Mr Brauch had installed the mother of his son in the house in Connaught Street and went to scatter there, but whether he should be regarded as her guest or she his was a question which did not have to be decided.

The registrar's appraisal of the evidence was correct; it was insuf-ficient to form a conclusion as to whether Mr Brauch had a dwelling whether Mr Brauch had a dwelling house in England within the meaning of section 4(1)(d), and accordingly, a respondent's notice challenging that finding failed. The appeal should be dismissed. Lord Justice Orr agreed, and Lord Justice Buckley delivered a concurring judgment. Leave to appeal was refused;

rababy, it's

Never has so much advanced engineering gone into a small car

We believe that advanced engineering should make a car work better without making it more complicated and expensive to maintain. Because the simpler a car is, the less it costs to own.

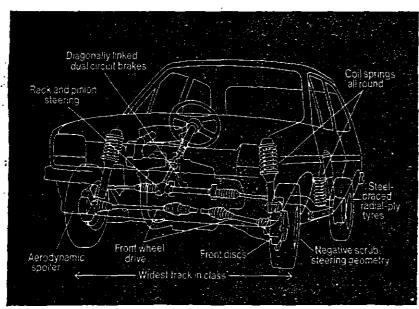

That's the thinking behind the new Ford Fiesta.

It's a three door hatch-back with folding rear seats, a transverse engine and front wheel drive.

In fact it combines all the best features of all small cars, in just one car: safe handling, a surprising amount of space and remarkable economy.

Safe, decisive handling

The steering has a built in safety feature called Negative Scrub Geometry. It helps to counteract a car's natural tendency to swerve one way or the other under adverse braking conditions, so it helps you stop in a straight line in emergencies. That means that if a front tyre blows out, or if you have to make a violent stop on a wet road, the Fiesta is much easier to control.

Some of the Fiesta's safety features.

The brakes are dual circuit with discs at the front. It's a diagonally linked system, so if one circuit should fail, you still have braking at both ends of the car.

Cornering? The Fiesta has the widest track in its class, with coil springs all round and steel-braced radial ply tyres. The steering is rack and pinion, the simplest, most direct system there is. And that spoiler under the front bumper creates down-forces that increase stability, especially at high speed.

The gearbox lives up to Ford's reputation for light, quick and precise changes, a real achievement with a front wheel drive car.

And there's a choice of engines: 950 cc (40 DIN bhp) which uses two star petrol for extra economy, 950 cc (45 DIN bhp) and 1100 cc (53 DIN bhp).

The Fiesta is nippy in traffic and a decisive overtaker on the open road. Performance and economy figures are listed in the panel below.

Engine size (cc)	Max. Speed (mph)*	DIN Fuel Consumption (mpg)*	3
950 (40 DIN bhp)	80	41.5	FIESTA L	from £1856 from £2079
950 (45 DIN bhp)	85	37.7	FIESTA S	from £2360
1100 (53 DIN bhp)	90	35.8	FIESTA GHIA	from £2657

For a baby, it's pretty big

There is more legroom in the back of the Fiesta than in any comparable car, and that's where it matters most. Admittedly, it's only a matter of inches more, but the clever thing is that we've made it feel even bigger than it really is. See how slim the roof pillars are? And look at the depth of the windows. It's really light and airy inside. The glass area is no less than 25 sq. ft., and you have 309° of all round vision. Quite a safety feature.

With the back seats folded there is 42.6 cu. ft. of luggage space. Or, to look at it another way, there's even room for a chest of drawers in the back.

The Fiesta has more legroom in the back than any comparable car.

And you see the way the back door, which is assisted by twin gas struts, opens to floor level. That means that you don't have to heave heavy cases over a high sill. Women drivers will appreciate this point when they're doing the weekly shopping.

For an advanced car, it's amazingly cheap to own electrostatically. Then,

Fuel consumption figures obtained using standard European procedure (DIN) are 37.7 mpg for the 950 cc 45 bhp models and 35.8 mpg for the 1100 cc models. And the 40 bhp models can do as much as 41.5 mpg on two star petrol*.

To reduce ownership costs further we've simplified servicing. To name just a few labour-saving features, the Fiesta has a self-adjusting clutch, self-adjusting brakes, maintenance free wheel bearings, and 'lubed for life' suspension and steering.

And since electrical systems are the biggest single cause of breakdowns, we've reduced the number of connections in the Fiesta to a bare minimum. For instance, it has a printed circuit instrument cluster.

You'll also find a surprising amount of space under the bonnet which makes everything very accessible. If you like to do your own servicing, you can get at all the parts you need to without skinning your knuckles.

The same attention to detail goes into the bodywork. First it's treated with phosphate which inhibits rust. Next the entire body is immersed in primer which is applied

"You years working on the project Palmer has gathered miles of filmed material illustrating, among other things, the terrible story of avarice and iniquity that is the story of a music "for the people and by the people". And it is, he thinks, to the great credit of Lord Delfont of EMI (one of the two financiers of the films) and the late Cyril Bennett of London Weekend Television that they stood by him and encouraged him when it became clear that what he was producing was not a melodic stroll down the mem-ory lane of twentieth-century

At one time Palmer, who went to the BBC straight from Cambridge in 1964, decided to drop out of film-making after documentaries on Hugh Hefner and Liberace because he thought he "couldn't do it". But now that he's back he's probably (with the exception of his two idols Kubrick and Russell) the best-run corrage industry in the film business. He lives in what, from the out-side, looks like a dilapidated mansion off the upper-class end of Ladbroke Grove. And only

If I want to get down here and work at the stuff from eight in the morning until I can't see straight any more, then there's nothing to stop me. Film to me is an obsession."

As is music. His training was purely classical, his next project is to be a six-part series on the life of Richard Wagner and he really wants to direct an opera. But in the meantime he's grateful to have been given the opportunity to disprove some of the factoids about popular music.

"Our method was to adopt what we call the Watergate process in that we never took anything that anybody said at face value, and we never really accepted anything unless we had checked it with three different people. And then we didn't necessarily agree with it." To help him do this he had a team of researchers (out of a total work force of 60) checking and cross-checking the mountains of transcribed interviews.

Hungarian rhapsody: pleasures of the Budapest Ballet and Opera summer, with the principal singers, conductor, designs and stage direction all borrowed Budapest Ballet, which shares the two stages with the opera company, ranks equally with it in quality of performance and is even more interesting in its repertory, thanks to the unique position it occupies as a kind ditably. of artistic hinge between west

Since 1950 it has imported a series of large-scale produc-tions from Russia. The present season's programmes, for in-stance, include Zakharov's Fountain of Bakhchisarai, Fountain of Bakhchisarai, Vainonen's Flames of Paris and the comic Creation of the World by Natalia Kasatkina and Vladimir Vassiliov. More recently, however, Budapest has also imported hallets fro the other side of Europe: Ash ton's La Fille mal gardée, Lander's Etudes and a complete Bejart evening. Together with the standard classics and a strong tradition of Hungarian choreography too, these permit an artistic diversity which can be found nowhere else.

As for the level of performance, there is not much wrong with a company that can make a success of La Bayadère and Etudes as the opening and closing works of a triple bill. Either of them, let alone both, put the ensemble through a rigorous test which, at the performance I saw the other day, the Budapest dancers passed triumphantly. Not only did they sparkle through the bravura marathon with smiling ease, but they somehow managed to look fresh right to the end.

That resilience says a lot for the quality of teaching at the ballet school attached to the theatre, and the crisp, elegant neatness that went with it says even more for the work of two splendid teachers on loan to the company from the Kirov Ballet, Baltacheyeva and Kumisnyikov. They are responsible also for the production of Bayadère, new this season, done with great attention to detail.

Choreographically, it is just like the Kirov Ballet's version. Stylistically, one would hardly expect it to match the impectable example set by the Kirov in 1961 or the Royal Ballet a decade ago, but in recent years I have seen many less distinguished performances from highly reputed companies than I watched in Budapest.

The leading Hungarian dancers being in demand for guest performances with other companies, Budapest welcomes each year a number of foreign dancers in return. Recent visitors have included Kolpakova and Vassiliev from Russia, Thesmar and Denard from France. Merle Park, who danced Fille with Nicholas Johnson, is due back shortly

Euclid which I so much enjoyed—should be omitted. Many a schoolchild has been put off mathematics for life by long division badly raught or logarithms (now largely superseded by the universal pocket calculator), or too much emphasis on those quadratic equations which seemed to lead to nowhere. How the basic competence is arrived at is not as important as that it should be achieved.

There is much that is good in modern primary school mathematics teaching, but some primary schools are better than others. When pupils from as many as 20 or more different primary schools all come together at the age of 11 into a large secondary school, mose who have been well taught can easily fall behind if they are not stretched and those who have not been as well taught can become confused. Mathematics is particularly vulnerable at this stage, just as instrumental music would be if class taught, and this just at the time before criticial choices of subject will be made at 13.

Britain has produced many great mathematicians: Newton, Boole, Whitehead, Russell, Hardy, Littlewood, Taylor, Lighthill... and there are many thousands of people who would not consider themselves good at mathematics who, given the motivation, are quick enough at working out gambling odds or take-home pay. With a little careful management of the talent we have, with less prejudice against mathematics and more recognition of its value as a basic subject—the problems in the schools could be solved within a decade or sooner: that is, if we are fully seized of the need and have the political will to do something about it. First, the current cut-back in entry to teacher training gives an opportunity to make mathematics to Olevel or an equivmake mathematics to O-level or an equivalent standard a required entrance qualification for all those who are to teach mathematics—which means for all those who train for primary schools. An intending teacher who had to make a special effort at school to gain O-level mathematics although finding this difficult, might be none the worse for this, gaining perhaps in sympathy and insight with future pupils who find special difficulty in mathematics. A basic A-level in mathematics should be required for those who intend to teach mathematics in secondary schools (which does not necessarily mean all secondary school teachers), and a degree which includes a substantial amount of mathematics should be a amount of mathematics should be a requirement for those who teach mathe-matics in sixth forms. This cuts right across the principle on which many comacross the principle on which many com-prehensive school systems have been on are being arranged—for at present there are comprehensive schools in which not one member of the staff is a qualified mathematician. It should not be beyond local authorities, backed by local teachers' unions, to see that this is remedied. At least the target should be set

Because teachers in post have security of tenure, there may meanwhile have to be special programmes of secondment for some selected teachers who wish to do so to follow concentrated courses in mathematical programmes of secondment for some selected teachers who wish to do so to follow concentrated courses in mathematical second s matics to make good what they missed themselves at school and during training. Some of those who are mathematically under-qualified might also be persuaded to accept early retirement to make way for the increasing number of young, trained but unemployed qualified

The schools could help by more internal regular assessments of pupils' progress in mathematics; by a modest return to short periods of formal teaching, both at the primary and secondary stages (the black-board and chalk is regarded by professional mathematicians as an indispensable means of communication within any group larger than two-speaking the mathe-matics as the symbols are written); and, perhaps, a choice of mathematical courses offered and even made compulsory in the last year or term before leaving school courses designed to rub-up basic skills and provide any special techniques relevant to intended employment or specialized continued education.

Most important is not to over-react. The endency of governments is to do not too little too late, but too much too late, thereby cresting inevitable counter reaction and backlash—whether this is in manpower planning, in managing the economy, or in adding fuel to new fashions in education. While encouraging innovation and experiment in education well-tried methods should never be lightly abandoned. Steady does it.

Commander Bob, the copper with the community as his beat

Commander Bob Bryan is a man with a mission: to make most people in London think that the capital's police are wooderful.

It is a difficult job at a time when crime figures are rocketing, when an immigrant popula-tion blames the police for much of its problems with an anger that culminated in last year's Norting Hill riots, and when young people are showing more and more contempt for the law. But the Commander, Head of the Community Relations Branch at Scotland Yard, says he is an optimist—" not a com-placent one but I believe good sense will prevail. If I were not an optimist I would not be

"Here" is an office with a big desk in front of a big plate glass window. In a dark busi-ness suit, he looks more like a stockbroker than a copper. But it is as a copper he likes to see himself.

Born in the Victoria Dock area of the East End, he spent the latter part of the war as a lieutenant in the Indian Army. He joined the police as a con-stable after discovering that neither commerce nor banking held out much attraction for him. So, filling up a form in the Radio Times, he applied to become a man on the beat. Now he is the one in charge of making sure that the public know more about the police and the police know enough about the public.

Most of his work is connected with immigrants. A lot of it concerns young people-understandable when you consider that half of the 103,000 people arrested last year were under 21 and a good percentage of those under 17. "I see the problem of the juvenile being inextricably linked with the problem of good community relations", he told me.

So he and his staff—many of whom are senior officers up to the rank of Chief Superintendent—go out to schools, to youth clubs and meet young people in their own surround

"We have an index of kids, juvenile offenders and others who come to grief so that we can keep as close an eye on them as possible", he said. "And if you need to have an indication of the concern this force has for the public, this gives an indication of our idea of service. I like to explain what policemen do.

"I am really trying to show some of the more disaffected sections of the public that. And I am not saying that it is always the immigrants who cause injury that are dignified and only when they had nothing trouble—the youngsters at the acceptable to relatives and better to do and were regarded. Shed or at football matches at friends. It is all part of the as an authoritarian group who Wembley Stadium who cause trouble are mostly white."

The problem is that most people who could really benefit from knowing more about the police are those who come across the men in blue only "when we are in a fire brigade role. They see us as predators".
He admits that not everything is perfect and that sometimes policemen turn out themselves to be criminals. He also knows that sometimes they are bigotted and have their own prejudices. "But our job is the same as in any management situation faced with square pegs and round holes. We try to redirect them and find a better slot for them."

He said that if people stopped to think what a policeman does—"and that 80 or 90 per cent of his time is spent in service to the community"— relations would be better than they are.

It is too early, he thinks, to decide how successful his team has been. It was set up be-cause of the escalating crime wave and poor inter-racial relations—and, rather like the detergent firms who find out how powerful their advertising has been only when they stop doing it has no wish to spend too much energy on introspec-

it is his department that looks after the problems caused by missing persons and the sudden appearances of unidentified bodies. After road deaths it is the training his department gives that helps the local Bobby to make "an-nouncements of death and "We will go almost anywhere anytime to try to convince young people that the most comfortable way is in socially acceptable behaviour and that the criminal way is uncomfortable and bitter." So now teams of his officers don't merely go to talk to young children about road safety but children about road safety but also to sixth formers about law and order. Some schools are including police lectures as part of their regular timetables leading up to CSE examinations. Vicars and priests are seen regularly. Scout groups are addressed. So are youngsters taking Duke of Edinburgh. Award scheme roupses.

out most evenings of the week talking to groups, large and small. Sometimes in a church small. Sometimes in a church hall, sometimes in private, houses drinking coffee—particularly in the homes of youngsters in care or others being given the work ethic." He likes, he says, the "eyeball-to-eyeball approach but he realizes there is just so much he can do. "If I went up to 50 youngsters in the Shed and said, "Why don't you all come back 'Why don't you all come back to the church hall and discuss social responsibility', I have a pretty good idea of what their answer would be."

But his constables working a local beat are getting to know individuals on a first name basis who have never got into trouble in their lives. There has been a tremendous success particularly with old people who know they have someone to call on when they are in difficulty.

But he would not like to extend that too widely. He sees dangers in policemen going un-invited into people's homes noticed into people's nomes without apparent good reason. Even so, he says: "My eyes have been opened recently to see just how many police officers quite modestly—and many officers don't like to talk about it—are active in the work community relations."

Talking about it too freely could spoil their relationship with the people they are trying

And, he adds forcibly, most policemen are dedicated to their work. "I have been talking to officers from various countries on the Continent and there are tremendous differences between us. It was put to me by one man that people in his country joined the police only when they had nothing better to do and were regarded to throw the buck in the direction of the Government trade unionists and employers' groups whom he does not think have done enough to fight prejudice and bring more equality into everyday life.

"In so far as I am a copper, I am apolitical." he says, "but with a strong sense of the political." But his job is more at grass-roots level, at the point of demonstrating to the public of demonstrating to the public constantly that the policeman is human. "I think there has always been a great deal of humanity in the service and that is one of the attractions to so many of the people who join it." The 245 people specializing in community relations work in the Metropolitan Police are there to demonstrate just that. Having said that, he believes not enough is known about the police—whose image is not helped by television. Softly, Softly Task Force and Z Cars, he says are "good entertainment but give a false impression of what we do".

He also consults and is consulted by the Home Office and organizations ranging from those responsible for the rehabilitation of alcoholics and exprisoners to the new Commission of Racial Equality.

Hospitals should provide all certificates required for National Insurance purposes by hospital in-patients. They should also provide them as necessary for persons under out-patient care when clinical responsibility for treatment rests with the hospital doctor and the patient is incap-able of work. This avoids the able of work. This avoids the necessity for such patients to visit their family doctor solely for the purpose of obtaining certificates, which the family doctor cannot properly give without an examination. It is proposed that the terms of service of general practitioners shall be amended to make it clear that general practitioners are not required to to make it clear that general practitioners are not required to give a certificate to a patient who, for the condition to which the certificate relates, is being attended by another doctor....

And they go on: The duty of prescribing rests with the doctor who at the time has the chinical responsibility for the patient's treatment so that where a hospital doctor bears the clinical responsibility for a patient baving a course of investigation or treatment as an out-patient, he should prescribe for the patient's needs. It is clear that the primary object of these two instructions is to save the patients the trouble of arranging unnecessary visits to or by their GPs rather than to save work for the GPs, though they will certainly do the latter as well.

It is understood that hospital doctors already have enough work and that they are reluctant to take on the burden of some of the form filling which has bedevilled the lives of GPs for years but, at a time when medical resources are in short supply, it is surely imperative that we should avoid wasteful duplication of effort. But there is another factor which is leading hospital authorities to drag their feet in these matters: finance. If hospital doctors fulfil their new duties with regard to prescribing, a sizable chunk of the GP's drug bill will be transferred to the hos-

The spag in all this from the patient's point of view is that GPs can only enforce their new "rights" by sending patients who are wrongly sent for certificates or drugs, back to the hospitals which have misdirected them. Many doctors are reluctant to use their patients as battering rams against the inertia of hospital bureaucracy, but some will feel that they have no way of changes without so doing. The short answer, and an urgently needed one, too, is that the Secretary of State must step in now and enforce his new rules. If he does not do so, patients who already suffer more than enough inconvenience, are likely to have even more to contend

Even in a century which has gorged itself on atrocities until it has become almost too replete to swallow more, the horrors which accompanied and have followed the fall of Cambodia to the communists are excep-tional both in their peculiarly barbaric nature and in the colossal scale on which they have been carried out. Millions of Cambodians were expelled from their homes—the capital was simply emptied, at bayoner point, of its entire population— and force-marched into the jungles, there to live as they might or die if they could not; several hundred thausand were obliged to adopt the latter course. In addition, many thousands were exterminated by

I think a statistical analysis would show that I have written about my black velvet confection, which passes as a dinner jacket, only infrequently. Yet whenever I give it a wearing, there are one or two loyal readers who will come up and greet it fondly, like an old friend.

> Rhodesia's borders do not constitute the entire equation. Mr Smith has indicated that he now intends to implement the Kissinger plan with the cooperation of reasonable and friendly African groups in Rhodesia. He has talked of his African friends so often, and ended up every time with such a pathetic hand-ful of powerless tribal chiefs, that this statement may be discounted as another device for gaining time. Bishop Muzorewa has reacted by saying that on his side he will only talk in terms of a prompt surrender of white power. He had to do this or risk being accused of becoming a Smith puppet, or worse epithets. It is not sure if his African support, still by far the largest of any Zimbabwe leader, could survive any softer line, though the fact that he has it testifies to a real African desire for a peaceful settlement.

fifties when the British destroyed the communist guerrillas by promising the Malayans early independence, which led them to join the British decisively in ejecting the insurgents. In such an upshot Mr Nkomo, if not Mr Mugabe and others, might think again.

As he made such a volte face in September it is tempting to think he might yet follow it through in such a way. But the omens are bad. An essential component of any new negotiation with the Muzorewa party must be swift, complete and whole-hearted dismantling of racial discrimination on the lines recommended in his own Quener report. Very clearly the diehard leaders of his own party jibs at the repeal of the white farmers' magna carta—the Land Appor-tionment Act. If Mr Smith cannot get this overdue reform through them, he would hardly seem capable of getting them to agree to handing political power by instalments to Bishop Muzorcwa.

The trouble with Mr Vorster's recent speech is that it has given the Front's hardliners new reasons for believing they can "win the war" and maintain white privilege, "the Rhodesian way of life", forever, at the cost of a few young men's blood. Only another such knock as they had last September will readjust their angle of vision. Unhappily now only some manifest military disaster remains to convince them-and that, unfortunately, would by the same token make ir virtually impossible for the Bishop's party to do a deal. Paradoxically they can only step in and become a moderate black government if the Smith regime neacefully concedes rule to them from a temporary position of

It took a major world war to overthrow the last power monopoly of the extreme right. No one has yet dared (and probably never will dare) to start the war which might end the rule of the monopoly power group of the extreme left which dominates the Eastern Block today. There can be no doubt that if "syndicarchy" came about in Britain, its people would also be dominated via both government and industry by a power group of the extreme left.

Bullock must be stopped now because its implementation will be the death knell of free enterprise. without free enterprise there will be no competition, no choice, no opportunity and no freedom. The British people will be politically sterilized and unable to act to save themselves without external help.

By all means let us develop true participation (well managed com-panies have already been doing so for years) but at all costs we must avoid "syndicarchy." Yours faithfully,

From Mr Madan Jaggi Sir, Considering the points raised by your corespondents on the Bullock Report, might one suggest that the proposals ought to be studied in their proper context, which embraces the following facts.

First, whether the origins of the West German economic miracle can be traced to the presence of the Committee, to which he was giving evidence on fisheries and fishery protection, that "in the case of the Soviet Union we are dealing with one of the most powerful maritime nations in the world " and that within our new 200 miles zone " gun boat diplomacy " would, for that reason, be out of place.

Three things are worth noticing.

The first is that once rules are set within an exclusive zone, how they are enforced is, by definition, a matter for the civil power of the coastal state: for its police, not for its armed forces. The role of the armed forces is merely to operate in support of the civil power"— in our present case, of the quasi-constabular fishery inspectors.

Any interference with the Navy acting in the role of carriers for the fishery inspectorate would be an interference in the domestic affairs of the country, and as the Soviet Government frequently recalls, any such interference is pro-nibited in the Helsinki declaration.

There is no possibility of "gun boat diplomacy" within the exclusive fishery zone once it is established only of the enforcement (or not) of

From the Chairman of the Stock worker director on that country's companies boards or not, the fact remains that some form of participation of the workers' representatives in the management of industry is the only reliable method of preventing confrontation management and labour. between

Secondly, the workers' participa-tion in the management of their respective companies is the only responsible method of consultation responsible method of consultation between interested parties on a continuous basis, as opposed to the present practice of ad hoc meetings after tempers have already been raised by stands taken in a joint venture by one side or another independently. Cooperation and consultation instead of confrontation is the only practically viable and morally sound method of preventing irresponsible attitudes by either party particularly when their reparty particularly when their re-spective interests may in the short run appear somewhat divergent.

Thirdly, the awkwardness of slow and repetitive proceedings in the board rooms is not too great a price to pay to gain the confidence of labour or to recompense it for the indifference that its point of view has had until now. Without worker cooperation we may as well stop thinking about a sound system of wage regulation including prob-lems relating to differentials.

Fourthly, one does not have to be either "an imported East Euro-pean" or an "economic adviser" to appreciate that certain methods of economic adjustments which are practicable in West Germany, may be contrary to the spirit in which things have historically been done in this country.

Yours faithfully, MADAN JAGGI, 78 North Road, Kew, January 29.

From Mr David Crouch, MP for Canterbury (Conservative) Sir, I recently took a party of MPs to Ludwigshafen to discuss the German system of worker participation with one of their biggest chemical manufacturers. Our group comprised both Labour and Conservative Members.

During the course of a six hour meeting with trade union members of the works council it was with some surprise that we noted their almost complete disinterest in the supervisory board. When we pressed them about their representatives on the board, they in turn expressed surprise because, as they explained, the real work of consultation and cooperation with management took place between the works council and the management board. There and the management locard. Here was full consultation on every aspect of the company's activities and future plans and the management board did not move without their agreement.

In fact, towards the end of the meeting—which took place in their own comfortable HQ provided by the company—it was hard to believe that one was not in the boardroom itself. This impression was confirmed the next day when we met members of the management board and discovered the same identity of purpose.

It was this revealing experience which prompted me to point out to the Prime Minister (Hansord. January 25) that the secret of indus-trial democracy, as practised in Germany, is one of cooperation and not a question of handing over control to one side or the other. The Prime Minister, in his reply, said that he accepted that the primerical of the control of the con ciple of industrial democracy must arise from agreement between both sides and he would be striving for such agreement in the discussions on the Bullock Report.

From Mr M. S. Sommer

January 27.

Sir, Your long, and on the whole admirable, leader on the Bullock Report today (January 27) succeeded in covering three columns without mentioning the word "shareholder" once. Indeed, all other comment until now seems ignore a fundamental equitable principle.

A shareholder, by law, has the remotest claim of anyone to a com-pany's funds. His rights are subpany's funds. In the service are survivent to those of employees, directors, the state (via the Inland Revenue), statutory officials such as, auditors, trade creditors and holders of loan stock. His income and capital are only secure if the company makes sufficient profit, whereas the claims of other categories are met in all but extremely adverse circumstances.

Furthermore, his rights regarding the appointment and removal of directors are tightly circumscribed and very hard to enforce in large companies. It is therefore more the force of tradition than of legal requirement that induces boards of directors to safeguard shareholders interests (and not for sentimental reasons either, since they are conscious that they may need to go to the market for more money in the future).

In these circumstances it is, to In these circumstances it is, to put it mildly, naive for apologists of Bullock to claim justice for the proposed "parity" of representation for capital and labour when their claims are so manifestly unequal already. Over the past few years suppliers of capital have done infinitely worse in real terms than those who render labour or than those who render labour or skills, and any further devaluation of the importance and influence of capital will, as you rightly say, discourage investment (particularly overseas investment) and chase money abroad. .

As a result, people will tend to stoke inflation by saving less and spending more, causing that lender of last resort, the Government, to intervene, for political reasons, in an increasing number of situations where it has no business to be. In fact the provisions of the Bullock report, if implemented, will gire further impetus to the already dis-tressing national pastine in which we waste precious productive energies trying to push money uphill. Yours faithfully,

M. S. SOMMER. Director, Sra-Power (Products) Limited, PO Box 806, W4. January 27.

From Dr G. K. Wilson When an undergraduate at Oxford, I served as an officer of the Student Representative Council. We argued that the university ought to allow students to elect a few

The vice-chancellor of the day explained the case against this eloquently. Instead the vice-chancellor suggested the creation of separate consultative bodies. The vice-chancellor was, at the time, Mr Alan Bullock. Perhaps we have both somewhat changed our opinions since then Yours faithfully,

The sale of Mentmore

Baron Mayer de Rothschild. having seen the Great Exhibition at Crystal Palace in 1851 commissioned Joseph Paxton to build him a palace. Mentmore with its massive square towers, pinnacles and gigantic hall with a glass roof, was the result. The Attorney-General

From Lord Boston of Favershain Sir, It is a very great pity indeed that you, in your leading article yesterday (January 28) beaded Not above the law", and other commentators should have imported into the argument over the Attorney-General's powers the emotive insinuation that he was seeking to demonstrate that he was above the law. Such an accusation serves only to cloud the issue and not to illuminate. Moreover it is unwarranted and unworthy and indeed unnecessary.

What the Attorney, Mr Sam Silkin, was seeking to do was to argue and establish that—far from being above the law—his powers were in fact part of the laws of England. I do not propose to discuss the merits here. But I do hope that trom now on we can remove from the controversy that unjustified smear. I happen to believe the Attorney's view of the law to be correct. But I trust that those who hold this view will not be charged with seeking to place him above the law; on the contrary; the contention is that his powers and his responsibility to Parliament are part of the law.

rid the party of this last handicap by roundly declaring that "Britain's road to socialism will be different from the Soviet road". The horrors of Soviet Communism are attributed to historical circumstances. The British Communists now believe that they can achieve their objectives without civil war and that Parliament "can be transformed into the democratic instrument of the will of the vast majority of the people". Whether or not that really marks a change of heart in the party, this approach accords with the strategy of the broad alliance in which Communist political purposes are to be attained by a sufficiently left-wing Labour Government-though the statement also stresses that a vital role is to be played by "mass struggle outside Parliament". The Boots Company is proud to support World Rheumatism Year

This is also a special year for us

To begin with, 1977 is our centenary year. One hundred years ago Jesse Boot took over from his mother the running of the family business in Nottingham and began to establish what has become one of Britain's most familiar High Street names.

And side by side with our development in retail pharmacy has been the evolution of The Boots Company into an international pharmaceutical manufacturing and marketing organisation engaged in exporting the products of its own scientific research world-wide.

World Rheumatism Year is the second reason for 1977 having special associations for us. For more than twenty years The Boots Company has recognised the importance of research into rheumatic disease. Our deep involvement in this field has not only contributed towards a deeper understanding of the disease process, but has also led to the discovery of a number of important antirheumatic drugs.

Of these ibuprofen (Brufen) is now prescribed in more than 110 countries, where for millions of rheumatic sufferers it has helped bring relief from pain and disability. And our research programme continues, to help make future years better ones for rheumatism sufferers throughout the world.

The BSC chairman has been making it clear in several speeches and in talks with trade union officials that he would like to see greater flexibility introduced under the next phase of pay policy.

At the BSC the constraints of the present pay phase have dealt a serious blow to the corporation's attempts to carry through job restructuring schemes and achieve a reduction in overall manning levels t out and sell with increased financial rewards ically they want for the workers who are enr of support retained.

In his note Sir Charles ob-served: "Many people at all levels are prepared to try harwrites: Today's they can keep it. But you canng will also have not do that in Britain today."

He suggests that it is for the Government to recognize the dustrial strategy is to be suc-cessful. A number of prominent trade unibn leaders are known to support his views, and the Government can expect growing pressure for more flexibility and scope for productivity bargaining.

Sir Charles also emphasizes the importance of generating greater interest among workers in their workplace and the products they make, suggesting that increased identification in smaller units would have beneficial effects.

He says that little progress will be made without mutual trust between management and unions and argues that Britain is still placed at a disadvantage with its major competitors be-cause of the continued attitude them and us".

Mr Ravi Tikkoo, the Londonbased shipping magnate, yesterday signed a letter of intent in New York for the construction of three 600,000 tons deadweight nuclear powered oil tankers, each with a price tag of $325m (about £191m). If the deal is confirmed it will be the biggest shipbuilding project.
This is the latest in a series of spectacular deals involving Mr Tikkoo, born in Kashmir who started his shipping company—Globtik Tankers—with a nominal capital of £100 ten years ago. It is now worth nearly £150m. He surprised the shipping world in the late 1960s with orders for two huge tankers with a Japanese yard At the time they were the largest ships ever built, each

The letter of intent signed yesterday with the Newport News Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Co, calls for a . construction agreement to be reached before the end of this year. This agreement, however, would be subject to a number of con-ditions, including the necessary United States government authorizations, and availability of suitable insurance, governmental nuclear indemnity and Total cost of the project at current prices would be about £560m and, according to a statement issued in London by Globtik, the proposed nuclear powered tankers would be registered in the United States and would be manned by American crews.

If the deal goes through, the tankers would be delivered in 1985, 1986 and 1987 with finance being provided from the United States.

Aid scheme for shipyards

By Peter Hill
Plans for introducing an emergency scheme to stimulate orders for British shipbuilding companies have reached an advanced stage. The scheme, which is being accorded priority by ministers and Whitehall, would involve, it is understood, establishing an intervention fund on which companies could draw to close the gap between British prices and those quoted by foreign competitors.
Union leaders have been 1 raising the pressing strongly for some form of inducement to yards which would enable them to compete more effectively for the reduced volume of orders.

Union leaders have estimated privately that at least £100m would be required to stimulate sufficient orders and to benefit as many yards as possible. How ever, the amount of money, which has not yet been allocated, is likely to fall short of that amount. It will be made available under the terms of the 1972 Industry Act but will be subject to the Government's cash limits policy.

£40m steel jacket contract may end oil platform order famine

By Roger Vielvoye

Chevron Petroleum, the United Kingdom subsidiary of Standard Oil of California, is in the final stages of negotiations with Highland Fabricators of Nigg Bay, Aberdeen, for a £40m steel jacket for a third oil production platform on the Ninian field.

If the negotiations are successful, a firm order for the jacket should be placed in about a month's time. The third platform for the field, complete with the deck and production modules, is expected to cost about £200m. The order, with another from

More groups expected to charge less for newsprint

Two thirds of newsprint supplied to this country come from Scandinavia and Canada and the producers claimed the increases were necessary be-cause of the fall in the value of sterling.

But the users' committee argued that since the increases were announced late last year the pound has strengthened considerably, and the increases were no longer justified.

The first company to lower prices was British International Paper. Mr Hetherington, who is joint deputy chairman of Beaverbrook Newspapers, said he expected Canadian Interna-tional Paper, one of Canada's major exporters of newsprint, to follow suit within the next day or two.

He added: "I also have been given an indication that a second Canadian company is second Canadian company is going to fall in line with the new prices. We believe that the Scandinavian suppliers will also be dropping their prices."

This follows the disclosure on Tuesday that the Metal Box group was considering pulling out of a 25-year-old investment in Israel after threats to some of its important customers from Arab countries.

The group is concerned that several of its customers have been told that if they use cans made by Metal Box—a company which is on the Arab blacklist—their products will be denied entry to Arab markets.

are expected to show that Britain's reserves rose by more than 50 per cent to between $6,500m and $7,000m during January from the low level recorded at the end of last year. Monthly figures from the Treasury are likely to support the claim made on Monday by Mr Healey. The Chancellor, that the United Kingdom is now clearly moving into a healthy position, and to give firm estimates of the extent to which the Bank of England has been able to replenish reserves through the foreign exchange marker.

The reserves will be automatically boosted from the 54,129m level recorded in December by the drawing of the first $1,150m from the International Monetary Fund loan of $3,900m.

This drawing will go a long way to cover the $1,600m borrowed under the stand-by serves would be around $2,000m, but the heavy drop in minimum lending rate at the end of the month may have led to some selling of sterling. The markets would probably not be surprised if the final figure showed the reserves in-creasing by around $1,600m on top of the IMF borrowing. The authorities have indicated consistently in recent weeks that they are not interested in getting inflows of "hot" money which moves easily into the reserves and moves just as.

The increase in the Company's revenue was due in part to higher franked income which benefited from the walcome increase in dividends paid by U.K. companies and in part to the greater value of our overseas dividends arising from the fall in starling. In spite of the very uncertain outlook, it seems not unreasonable to expect a further increase in our franked income this year since several of the companies which comprise our largest U.K. investments are well placed to raise their dividends

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Laying the foundations of a national energy policy

From Mr Norman Jenkins

Sir, The appeal in your issue of January 26 by Mr Mike Thomas and 13 other Labour MPs is an emotional one that is not related to the best interests of the United Kingdom national energy dilemma nor to the labour force available.

With a surplus generating capacity of at least 40 per small we shall be overtaken cent with more still being once again. cent, with more still being built and a declining use of electricity, there are other and better alternatives. We must not continue to build plant that uses three units of fuel for every one put to good use. This is merely to perpetuate the technique begun by Ferranti, Crompton, Edison and others in the 1890s.

The steam railways of that era have died an economic death; we cannot afford similarly to waste so much fuel in producing electricity regardless.

By decentralizing and combining producing useful heat with some electricity, we can cope with such growth as there may be until more acceptable nuclear reactors can be developed. Even then, they need

The electricity industry understandably opposed combining heat and powerthey will have to yield priority to heat in the energy-based economy that is being forced upon us. The objections raised against CH & P are biased and contrived; they do not com-pare the objective of an allpare the objective of an all-electric age, with full exploi-tation of the whole energy package which inescapably must contain twice as much heat as electricity, a physical fact that our steam railways ignored far too long.

Computer price coding and the elderly

From Mr S. L. Maughan will be speeded up by as much Sir, On behalf of the Article as 40 per cent.

Sumber Association the There will be no need for a sum of the speeded up by as much as 40 per cent. Association, the Number organization of retailers, grocery product manufacturers and other suppliers to the industry, which will coordinate the allocation and use of computer numbers for virtually all United Kingdom food and grocery products, I hasten to reassure Mr Faulkner, honorary director of Help the Aged (letters January 21) that we wholeheartedly share his conviction and concern that this development must not inconvenience or confuse shoppers, tually particularly those members of society such as the elderly. Indeed, unsensible behaviour to the contrary would be both uncaring and uncommercial. For the following reasons we are confident that article numbering and its probable sequel, symbol marking, will benefit shoppers, young and old:

1. Unit prices of all items sold will be conspicuously and unambiguously signposted where each product is displayed in the store. This price marking will clearly identify the pro-duct, the manufacturer, the pack size and the price per item to which it refers. There will be no latitude for confusion.

2. While some retailers may decide in the interest of efficiency to discontinue price-marking individual packs as symbol marking is implemented, other retailers may resolve to continue individual pack price-marking for sound marketing reasons. Indeed, even if symbol marking should become standard procedure, smaller retail outlets will continue individual pack price-marking if their turnover volume is insufficient to jus-tify the investment required for the electronic checkout equipment. Even without this equipment, their head office, wholesaler and warehouse operations will be made more efficient in terms of stock con-

3. This increased efficiency, ferms of particularly in terms reduced investments buffer " stocks, will retailers to trim costs and thus keep prices lower for shoppers than they would otherwise be—in much the same way that self-service has.

5. There will be no need for a "key to code numbers" at the checkout, as the price of each product purchased will be prominently shown where the product is displayed. Furthermore, the checkout equipment will "read" the symbol marking and translate this into an iteand translate this into an ite-mized list which identifies each product purchased and its price. From Mrs Sarah Civval Sir, I write to support Mr Hugh Faulkner's letter in today's Times (January 21). I am 68 years old and find it suffitiently difficult already to shop with ease in supermarkets. We are urged to do "comparison shopping and have to work out which is the better buy when similar goods are packed in different quantities at different prices. How anyone is to do this when prices are no longer plainly marked on the packets I cannot think.

It may be better for the stores and make for efficiency as far as they are concerned, but what of the really elderly customers, many of whom have hardly come to terms with decimal currency. In fact, busy shoppers of all ages will have problems in sorting this one out. Please — supermarkets, think again! Yours faithfully SARAH CIYVAL

Single organization set up for insurance brokers

By John Brennan Insurance Correspondent

With the formation yesterday of the British Insurance Brokers' Association, the insurance broking industry now has one representative organization. The BIBA formally brings together the four main broking organizations that have been working jointly since January 1976 on proposals for industry-wide regulations within the British Insurance Brokers' Council.

Mr Francis Perkins, the association's first chairman, said yesterday that this was " a dramatic event in insurance history". He explained that "it is our intention and our hope to bring into the association all brokers able to comply with the minimum qualifying standards, so that standards as a whole can be raised for the industry and for the public ".

Reed International Sustaining recovery

With the market expecting a slowdown in Reed Inter-pational's recovery rate, news of third quarter profits £2in ahead of the previous three months was enough to sweep caution aside and push the share price up 16p to 230p yesterday. However this result could represent an exceptional peak and previous estimates of around £70m for the full year need not

The monopoly and efficiency improvements particularly at IPC will be foot-ing the bill for higher paper prices in the fourth quarter. With a downturn likely here and no significant recovery yet in sight in Canada following the Ontario labour troubles fourth quarter profits should be more in line with the £17m and £18m profits of the first two quarters. Profits of £72m for the full year would put the shares on a

On a short-term view yesterday's rise could trigger some profit-taking, though with the prospect of a return to calmer conditions in Canada next year and the paper cycle still on the upswing Reed could be in line for more than £100m next year.

MLR The formula under pressure

Is Minimum Lending Rate, one of the last remaining vestiges of Competition and Credit Control, about to be consigned to the dustbin? The question has been bandied around the mar-ket for a couple of weeks now and the speculation has inevitably increased as it has become clearer both that control over short term interest rates has been prised from the Bank of England's grasp and that the Bank is anything but pleased about the development.

The idea of MLR when it was introduced under Chancellor Barber was that it would be fixed according to a set formula in relation to the week-ly Treasury Bill tender, this in turn reflecting the supply and demand position in the money markets. In short, the markets rather than the Bank would be s figures on stock worth £18m to profits at the left to set the basic pattern of transactions during attributable level, and £147m to interest rates.

Not, in fact, that things necessarily worked out quite like this in practice. What has tended to happen has been that the Bank, through both its reading of the market and through the nod and the wink in the direction of the discount houses has been able to guide the level of the Treasury Bill tender and so create an interest rate structure that was felt to be consistent with other aspects the Government's economic

The problem of late, however, has been that the Bank's flag-ging of signals to the discount marker has been to little pur-pose since the houses have ceased to be the major force at the weekly Treasury Bill ten-der. Such has been the attrac-tion of Treasury Bills as a short-term investment in a climate of falling interest resea that hash falling interest rates that bank tendering (generally on behalf of clients) has swamped the discount houses' tender. Last week's offer of £300m of bills, for instance draw applications for instance, drew applications totalling £2,686m, and, to the extent that the discount houses played the Bank's game, they were apparently left out in the

The key question now is whether the authorities feel that this is simply a temporary phenomenon or whether they feel that there is an underlying structural change taking place that requires a different ap-proach on their part—presumably a return to something akin to the old Bank Rate mechanism whereby the Bank was free to set its going rate as lender of last resort at the level of its own choosing.

The monopoly

News yesterday that English China Clays had increased its shareholding in Watts, Blake, Bearne sent a shiver through the pottery industry.

Between them WBB and ECC supply virtually all the ball clay used for ceramic ware in this country. WBB has only around 3 per cent of the domestic market for china clay against ECC's 95 per cent, but WBB supplies 65 per cent of the pall clay market, and ECC accounts for virtually all the rest.

The potters cannot have relished the possibility of facing a monopoly rather than the current duopolistic supply. more pragmatically, smelling a bid and marking WBB's shares 6p higher to 118p.

However, it seems that the potters need not get too nor market too enthusiastic. ECC was offered, and accepted at just under 110p a share, Trafalgar House's long-standing stake in WBB. ECC made its intentions known to WBB and says now that it will not be buying further shares in the group. Nor does it want board representation. WBB makes it clear that it has no wish to be absorbed by ECC and that ECC's aims appear to be consistent with that view. In any case, discreet soundings of the Monopolies Commission by both groups shows it willing to accept this deal, and any subsequent attempted bid would run so clearly counter to the public statements of the companies now as to guarantee the Comaction. ECC's move would therefore seem to ensure

This political objective is supported by strong practical industrial objectives. An increase in democracy in industry is likely in the longer term at least to mean an increase in industrial efficiency. Most of us work in highly organized and structured enterprises of sections.

prises or services. Our own knowledge, skills and ambitions must be expressed within these highly organized circumstances—an expression that will only come with involvement, an involvement most easily developed through industrial democracy.

Industrial relations could be improved. Many disputes arise from the effects of strategic decisions taken years before, on, for instance, investment, man-power planning, mergers. In-volvement in these strategic decisions, which is what indus-trial democracy is about, will reduce the likelihood of these disputes.

Management effectiveness could be increased. The style of most effective managements has changed from authoritarian to participative—a development which will be hastened by industrial democracy.

Socially, if we are to respond to the changes in our society without major upheavals, radical and fundamental changes have to be made to alter the legal situation, and to democratize the decision-making

The Bullock Committee Report* rightly emphasizes the changes that have taken place within British industry—the changing consciousness and expectations of the British workforce, the increasing remoteness rather than merely a propor-

Progress in defeloping industtrial democracy in this country, bowever, has been painfully slow—there are but few examples where management seeks consensus with trade union representatives on the strategic decisions they have to make.

The current laws hinder rather than help its development. Legally speaking, the company is operated solely for the benefit of its shareholders. However much some apologists may apply that the chief it is its same apologists. may imply that this is just a legal fiction, this legal fact defines the whole archaic system of our industrial society. It condemns workers, who have invested their working lives, tion of their savings in the company, to the status of hired hands.

To quicken the rare of progress the law must be changed —as has proved necessary in every country in which there has been a significant develop-ment of industrial democracy. Some, but not too many, would argue with the principle of the need for new legislation. the major arguments are about the form legal support should take, and the General and Municipal Workers' Union differs, as do other unions, over this from the TUC and the Pullerk Committee the support that the support the support that the support Bullock Committee recommenning decisions with representa-tives of recognized trade

The GMWU in evidence to the Bullock Committee asked that a much more radical change than that proposed by the TUC should be made to company law and to industrial relations. We asked for a general legal requirement on all employers obliging them to agree to the establishment of methods for discussion and agreement on strategic plan-mg systems in the United Kingdom. The Bullock Committee recommendations, for workers on the boards of companies employing over 2,000, do nothing for those workers and trade unions who are in favour of greater participation in strategic planning, but do not want worker/directors. In my view the majority of trade union shop stewards favour something more like the GMWU's approach which is much more in formula.

At the present stage of development in collective bargaining, it would have been an approach which, by fostering direct negotiation on strategic plans, allowed unions clearly to between our approach and that of the TUC and Bullock Com-mittee, although the Bullock proposals depart from the original policy in the TUC 1974 Congress Report.

It is unfortunate that the views of unions such as the GMWU have not been reflected in the recommendations and that the debate at the 1976 TUC Congress did not establish a clear consensus in the trade union movement.

A further debate is needed on Bullock within the move-ment (and within management circles as well) to establish that consensus. But the need for further consultation should not lessen the sense of urgency on the part of the Government. The GMWU believes that there must be legislation and there must be legislation soon. We are utterly opposed to those who resist any attempt to introduce legislation on industrial democracy at all costs.

The Confederation of British Industry have been forced to adopt the appearance of a more positive policy as a result of the pressure for legislation by the TUC. But they have still got a long way to go. The Gov-ernment should not now lessen the pressure. The backwoods-men of the CBI must not be allowed to stop all progress.

I want to see legislative action. The GMWU is not lining up with those employers who want to preserve the status quo. Quite the contrary.

I believe that our proposals are far more radical and funda-mental than those advanced by Bullock, and certainly they would give to far more workers a basis for developing the field of industrial democracy.

Any legislation on effective industrial democracy will be of the profoundest social signifiof industrial life for decades. It is therefore vitally import-

Industrial strategy 3: electronic components

£20m to make up lost ground

The decision of Mr Eric Varley, the Secretary of State for Industry, to put on the table around which a manufacturing sector working party sits and discusses its problems £20m of public funds is surely evid ence of Government interest in the outcome of those discus-

This has been the result of a year's deliberations, with repre-sentatives from such companies as Mullard, Plessey, and ITT serving under a trade union chairman and working with several other union officers. Broadly, the sector covers radio and electronic compon-ents. To be more precise, it cathode ray tubes, semi-con-ductors, rectifiers and other ranging from integrated circuits to capacitors, resistors record-plaver mechanisms. More than 142,000 people are employed on such products and about 28 per cent of their out put goes abroad. That would seem a line record, but there is a large adverse balance of trade. Over the past two and a half years some 26,000 people have lost their jobs, many in development areas.

Something has been going wrong. Over the past decade, according to the strategy team, the worldwide electronic components industry has been characterized by a dramatic growth in output, cost/perfor-mance ratios and international trade. But Britain's share has zone into decline.

Some 17 years ago the United Kingdom was almost self-sufficient in electronic parts. cruising along with very imports, some exports and a modest favourable balance of trade. Yet in the mid-seventies more than half our components needs are being met by imports —and this despite a handsome ment manufacturers on over-tivity, and more specialization growth in United Kingdom seas sources has already caused may be the answer. The reasons are not hard to find. The American semi-conductor companies have gained much ground in world markers, while the Japanese manufacturers are dominating production of high volume and standardized low-cost devices for consumer goods. Another factor has been the tendency of the component companies who operate on an international scale to concentrate production of particular items in a few areas to obtain advantages of

There can be no doubt that United Kingdom electronics equipment makers have benefited from the low prices arising from concentrated com-ponent manufacture and from the fast technological develop-ments (especially in semi-conductors). Yet vulnerability to shortages has risen because of the growing dependence on overseas suppliers, while overequipment competitors closer to stronger components industries enjoy certain competitive advantages. The strategy team has set itself the aim of raising the United Kingdom's competitive-ness and undertaking new development within an increasingly strong and integrated European components industry. The Japanese output of coluor television sets already roughly equals the total output of Euro-pean set makers, so that it is evident that only a European-wide approach can match the advantages of scale enjoyed by the Japanese rivals.

For the future there is worry that serious shortages of imported components could well develop as world demand recovers. The growing reliance of the United Kingdom equipsome severe cutbacks or the irretrievable loss of British When the industry supplies up to 150,000 different items the possibility of stockpiling by equipment makers must seem limited. Nonetheless, the com-ponent makers need some idea of forward demand to achieve realistic planning.

To this end the Electronic Components Board has begun consulting with equipment man-ufacturers' interests on forward demand, identifying areas of potential shortage and oppor-tunities for reforms in the chain of supply.

No one is under any illusion that Britain can have the advantage of the huge home mar-ket base of America or Japan, but there is self-confidence about technological develop-ment and a belief that British skills can attract multinational companies looking for bases

There has to be efficiently

Britain now imports, for example, perhaps 60 per cent of semi-conductor needs and for newer, more complex, circuits the proportion is much higher. There has been no more dramatic demonstration of Britain's position than in television

Thorn colour tube plant at Skelmersdale means that half of the national requirements now come from abroad. Japanese pricing of both tubes and sets has shaken United Kingdom confidence and the Government has had to infor imports. A bitter lesson has been learnt in Whitehall that large fluctuations in demand for electronic consumer goods as a result of Government policies have had a devastating effect, It is cold comfort that British skill in record-player mechan-isms remains evident in world markets. As far as finance is con-changes in demand affect that profitability and the use of capacity do not encourage the levels of investment achieved by many overseas competitors. Nonetheless, there has been growth in investment spending above general manufacturing rates which a greater stability in government policy towards consumer goods could improve. Mr Varley has come forward with an offer of £20m as a first tranche of aid under the Industry Act to provide the com-panies with a quarter of the costs of projects concerned with design, development and pro-duction or with the launching of new products. Cheap loans and building grants are to be made available and there is to encouragement " use of consultants to identify opportunities for raising effici-

Thus a year or more of talk-ing and identifying problems is now being followed up by some specific action. That is what the development of an industrial strategy has been all about.

Last week Antonio Bisaglia. the Minister for State-Owned Industry, said that the 1,200m lire was the sum claimed for severance pay and under a management contract by Einaudi, who had to resign from the ailing Egam last June. Einaudi had been criticized for agreeing to buy for Egam a Genoa shipping firm, Villain e Fassio, which was subsequently declared bankrupt. Exact computations published in the Italian press gave a total claim of 1,206,940,015 lire. Einaudi, interviewed yesterday in the newspaper Republica, said the minister was apparently misinformed. He preferred not to give an exact figure, but admitted receiving advance severance pay from posts in the Egam group of a gross 162m lire (£108,000), which in net terms was about 100m lire (about £67,000). The object of his claim, he went on, was not monetary indemnification, but recognition that his management at Egam had been correct, in particular over the Fassio pur-chase. "I could be contented with a symbolic one lira", Einaudi added.

The Egam group is in a serious situation, with debts of about 900,000m lire (about £600m), most of them shortterm. Parliament has approved emergency allocation of commitments until the end of

Following close upon the re-sults of Amex Bank, First In-ternational Bancshares Ltd now reports a similar impressive growth in profits which almost doubled last year to £1.29m before tax, but after an additional 5440,000 loan loss provision.
After tax profits were up from 5311,000 profits were up from £311,000 to £600,000. The bank's loan portfolio increased from £47.1m to £60.3m, but a growing porportion of income-just over a third before operating expenses—has come from fees and corporate finance earnings. Profit before tax represented a 1.1 per cent re-

Bucknall Trust's directors now consider that liquidation would ield about 24p a share before liquidation expenses. As most of the assets are held in shortdated Government stocks, liquidation could proceed rapidly.

They have not yet received Bremar's formal offer and understand that it will not be forthcoming before the EGM. This has been convened for February 4. Accordingly the directors are unable at present to comment on this proposed offer and recommend that liquidation would be in shareholders' best interests.

The dollar moved ahead strongly on the foreign exchanges yesterday afternoon as moderate demand, particularly from the US, developed on a thin market.

The dollar traded at 2,4155-70 marks in London after most West German banks had closed, compared with a "low" of 2,4040 marks during the morning. The overnight rate had been 2,4110-20. Dealers said that the dollar's decline on Monday, amidst fears that the present cold spell might depress the US economy, had now evaporated.

Discount market The Bank of England again made the discount houses take part of their help in seven-day lending at MLR (122 per cent) yesterday. The intention behind the signal was " to reinforce and continue" that given on Monday, when the Bank was indicating dis-pleasure with the sharp decline in Treasury bill rate that toppled MLR by a full point on Friday. The Bank made it clear yester-day that it was still looking back to what happened on Friday rather than looking forward to the level of interest rates that may be appropriate in the future. The nine or 10 houses who took the large seven-day lending yester-day also took an exceptionally large amount of overnight lending at MLR and some obtained a small sum by selling Treasury bills and local authority bills to the bank. After the assistance, rates that had held 12½ per cent for the previous part of the session fell away smartly, so that houses closed their books anywhere between that level and 9 per cent.
